Dying For Time Proust Woolf

Dying for Time: Proust, Woolf, Nabokov ultimately convinces one of the validity of its author's Derrida-influenced challenge, as Martin Hägglund carefully refutes prominent critics, as well as Freud and Lacan, and consistently proves the validity of his chronolibidinal reading of these texts. Not only do we see how deconstruction is put to a new advantage via Hägglund's approach, but one is also moved by the elemental struggle to survive depicted in each of these three modernist ...

Novels by Proust, Woolf, and Nabokov have been read as expressions of a desire to transcend time. Hägglund gives them another reading entirely: fear of time and death is generated by investment in temporal life. Engaging with Freud and Lacan, he opens a new way of reading the dramas of desire as they are staged in both philosophy and literature.

Dying for Time — Martin Hägglund | Harvard University Press

Dying for Time is a bold book that is conceptually sophisticated and at the same time underpinned by exemplary close readings of major modern novels and philosophical-theoretical texts. At the heart of Hägglund's argument is his notion of chronolibido, which 'traces the constitutive difference of desire to the condition of time' (p. 3).
